The classic guide to working from home and why we should embrace a virtual office, from the bestselling authors of Rework " A paradigm-smashing, compulsively readable case for a radically remote workplace. " —Susan Cain, New York Times bestselling author of Quiet Does working from home—or anywhere else but the office—make sense? In Remote, Jason Fried and David Heinemeier Hansson, the founders of Basecamp, bring new insight to the hotly debated argument. While providing a complete overview of remote work 's challenges, Jason and David persuasively argue that, often, the advantages of working " off-site " far outweigh the drawbacks. In the past decade, the " under one roof " model of conducting work has been steadily declining, owing to technology that is rapidly creating virtual workspaces. Today the new paradigm is " move work to the workers, rather than workers to the workplace. " Companies see advantages in the way remote work increases their talent pool, reduces turnover, lessens their real estate footprint, and improves their ability to conduct business across multiple time zones. But what about the workers? Jason and David point out that remote work means working at the best job (not just one that is nearby) and achieving a harmonious work-life balance while increasing productivity. And those are just some of the perks to be gained from leaving the office behind. Remote reveals a multitude of other benefits, along with in-the-trenches tips for easing your way out of the office door where you control how your workday will unfold. Whether you 're a manager fretting over how to manage workers who " want out " or a worker who wants to achieve a lifestyle upgrade while still being a top performer professionally, this book is your indispensable guide.

In his classic book, The Five Dysfunctions of a Team, Patrick Lencioni laid out a groundbreaking approach for tackling the perilous group behaviors that destroy teamwork. Here he turns his focus to the individual, revealing the three indispensable virtues of an ideal team player. In The Ideal Team Player, Lencioni tells the story of Jeff Shanley, a leader desperate to save his uncle 's company by restoring its cultural commitment to teamwork. Jeff must crack the code on the virtues that real team players possess, and then build a culture of hiring and development around those virtues. Beyond the fable, Lencioni presents a practical framework and actionable tools for identifying, hiring, and developing ideal team players. Whether you 're a leader trying to create a culture around teamwork, a staffing professional looking to hire real team players, or a team player wanting to improve yourself, this book will prove to be as useful as it is compelling.

The research interview is based on the conversations of daily life and is a professional conversation to any interviewer's daily interviewing task. It is an interview, where knowledge is constructed in the interaction between the interviewer and the interviewee. Any one interviewer needs to know an interview is a conversation that has a structure and a purpose and it becomes a careful questioning and listening approach with the purpose of training thoroughly tested knowledge. The research interview is not a conversation between equal partners because the interviewing researcher needs to define and control the situation for interview. The positive application interview researcher needs to introduce the topic of the job interview and also critically, follows up on the subject's answer to his/her interviewing questions. So, it is one time spending tasks to any interviewers, when any interview needs to be carried on. I shall indicate the main interview learning points as below: The first interview learning point is any job interviewing is an active process where interviewer and interviewee through their relationship produce social knowledge. Interview knowledge is product in a conversational relation. The conception interview knowledge presented to contrast with a methodological positivist conception of knowledge as given facts to be quantified, e.g. in one journalist position application interview, the interviewer asks the same question to ten applicants. The question: How do you have more confidence to apply your past journal writing working experience and knowledge to do this journalist job? When these ten applicants listened this question. They will have different feeling to answer this question. Hence, the interviewer can follow their different answers or feedbacks to compare these 10 applicants' consumers to judge whether whose answers can have more reasonable to be accepted as well as the interviewer also needs to record how much time, that they need to answer this question. Hence, a conception of research interviewing is as a rule governed method, it will lead to different job application interview practices than an understanding of research interviewing as a tool, where the quality of the kind of job interview knowledge is more important to compare the skills and the personal judgement of the interviewer. The another interview learning point is the interviewer needs to understand whose interview tasks is a semi-structured life and he/she needs to attempt to understand the applicant's lived everyday world from his/her subjects' own perspectives, when the interviewee attempts to answer the interviewer's any interviewing questions by whose own methods. This kind of interview seeks to obtain descriptions of the interviewees' lived world with respect to interpretation of the meaning of the described phenomena. It comes close to an everyday conversation, such as the interviewer's everyday asking interviewing questions and listening the interviewer's every job applicant's answers or feedbacks, but when the interviewer assumes whose interview tasks, it needs to involve a specific approach and technique, it is semi-structured and it is neither an open everyday conversation nor a closed questionnaire between the job interviewer himself/herself and whose any job applicants. It is conducted according to an interview guide that focuses on certain themes and that may include suggested questions. The job application interview is usually transcribed, and the written text and sound recording together constitute the materials for the subsequent analysis of meaning after every time interview. It aims to let the interviewer himself/herself can make more accurate judgement to select whom is the most right applicant to the job.
