The manner in which people have been talking and writing about 'development' and the rules according to which they have done so have evolved over time. Development Discourse and Global History uses the archaeological and

trace the origins of development

discourse back to late colonialism and notes
the significant

discontinuities that led to the establishment of a new discourse

and its accompanying industry. This book
goes on to describe

the contestations,

This book examines the phenomenon of urban fear – the increasing anxiety over crime and violence in Western cities despite their high safety – with a view to developing a comprehensive, critical, exploratory theory of fear, space, and urban planning that unravels the paradoxes of their mutual relations. By focusing especially on the southern European cities of Palermo and Lisbon, the book also aims to expand upon recent studies on urban geopolitics, enriching them from the perspective of ordinary, as opposed to global, cities.

Readers will find enlightening analysis of the ways in which urban fear is (re)produced, including by misinformative discourses on security and fear and the political construction of otherness as a means of exclusion. The spatialization of fear, e.g., through fortification, privatization, and fragmentation, is explored, and the ways in which urban planning is informed by and has in turn been shaping urban fear are investigated. A concluding chapter considers divergent potential futures and makes a call for action. The book will

Cultural diversity - the multitude of different lifestyles that are not necessarily based on ethnic culture - is a catchphrase

increasingly used in place of
multiculturalism and in conjunction with globalization. Even though it is often used as a slogan it does capture a widespread phenomenon that
cities must contend
with in dealing with

The contributors
examine how Russian
cities are responding
and through case
studies from Moscow,
St. Petersburg, Novosibirsk, and Sochi explore the ways in which different cultures are inscribed into urban spaces, when and where they are present in public space, and where and how they carve out their private spaces.

Through its unique exploration of the Russian example, this volume addresses the implications of the fragmented urban landscape on cultural practices and discourses, ethnicity,
